Glimpse

Glimpse Magazine Through the Years

Since 2008, the Greenville-Pitt County Chamber of Commerce's annual Glimpse magazine has served as the official quality of life magazine for the Greenville-Pitt County area. While Greenville and Pitt County have witnessed unprecedented growth over the last 17 years, the mission of Glimpse has remained the same – to showcase Greenville and Pitt County to current and prospective citizens, highlight our progressive business climate, bring hidden gems into the spotlight, and promote the area's burgeoning economy.

The publication first premiered in 2002 as Images of Greenville-Pitt County with the purpose of communicating who we are as a community and promoting our economic strength and growth potential to new businesses. Images of Greenville-Pitt County became Glimpse in 2008, marking the first year the magazine was produced in-house.

To accompany area statistics and demographics, the 2008 magazine highlighted the opening of the East Carolina Heart Institute, the Painted Pirate Project (a partnership of the chamber and the East Carolina Alumni Association), and an overview of the area's sports and recreation attractions. Since that time, each issue of Glimpse has included articles of local interest specific to the Greenville-Pitt County community, with a focus on education, the arts and culture, economic and workforce development initiatives, health care, and community engagement.

Over the years, Glimpse has provided tremendous value to our community by offering a platform to celebrate and market local businesses that drive economic growth and keeping residents informed about developments and opportunities within Pitt County. Glimpse has strengthened connectivity by encouraging partnerships among businesses, organizations, and the broader community – all while positioning Greenville-Pitt County as a vibrant, thriving destination for visitors and potential investors.

Since 2008, the chamber has distributed over 150,000 copies of Glimpse throughout Pitt County and year-after-year, each issue has been designed to capture the largest audience possible with high-quality design and professional written content. The anticipation of Glimpse each year is an indication of the magazine's appeal and promotional value for Greenville and Pitt County. The publication has had an impactful role on the chamber's ability to assist with the combined efforts to make our community an attractive destination.

The chamber would like to thank our community members for allowing Glimpse to serve as your official quality of life guide for the past 17 years. Your trust and support have been the foundation of this publication's success, and we remain committed to showcasing all that makes Greenville and Pitt County an extraordinary place to live, work, and thrive.

By celebrating our area's success and potential, Glimpse reinforces the chamber's mission of promoting economic progress and a high quality of life for all community members. Glimpse is and will continue to be a key publication in determining the perception of what makes up Greenville and Pitt County.
